KNUD WEFALD TO CONTEST SELVIG ELECTION

LEGAL BATTLE NOW SEEMS IN PROSPECT

THE FARMER-LABOR CANDIDATE
GIVES NOTICE TO SECRETARY OF STATE
WEFALD TAKES ACTION AFTER 3 DAYS' CONFERENCE WITH HIS LAWYER

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—(UP)—A legal battle over the Minnesota congressional seat which republicans recaptured from farmer-laborites in the general election on November 2 was started today.

Representative Knud Wefald, farmer-labor, gave notice to Secretary of State Mike Holm that he intended to contest the election of C. G. Selvig, republican, as representative from the Ninth Minnesota congressional district, under the state corrupt practices act.

Notice was sent through James Witherow, of Moorhead, attorney for Wefald, after a three day conference between Witherow and Wefald at Crookston, home town of Representative-elect Selvig.

Secretary of State Holm's office admitted to the United Press that it had received the notice of contest from Witherow.

Witherow said the contest would be based on certain printed pamphlets, which Selvig is alleged to have circulated during the campaign, charging that Wefald voted for the immigration quota restriction act in the house.

Wefald was the only one of the farmer-labor delegation of three unseated in the last election on the face of returns. The official vote unofficially compiled gave Selvig a majority of 962. The vote as announced by Secretary of State Holm was: Selvig, 33,477; Wefald, 32,505.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 22.—Despite notice of contest sent to Secretary of State Mike Holm at St. Paul, the only comment forthcoming here today from Representative Knud Wefald was a broad intimation that he would attempt to overthrow the election of C. G. Selvig as representative from the ninth Minnesota congressional district.

James Witherow of Moorhead, attorney for Wefald, has been here with Wefald for the last three days considering the contest.

Wefald in an interview with the United Press declined to discuss the nature of the charges to be filed but did not deny the possibility of a contest.

CLAIMS KNOWLEDGE MAY BE GAINED WHILE ASLEEP

Minneapolis, Nov. 22.—(UP)—Studying while asleep may give our football players an opportunity to devote all their waking moments to the game.

William T. Heron, assistant professor of psychology at the University of Minnesota, is going to intensify education by testing the theory that knowledge may be absorbed while asleep.

Psychologists believe that inasmuch as the subconscious mind is most alert while we slumber, it can be schooled to absorb information without our awakening.

Professor Heron will use a set of headphones attached either to a radio or to an electric phonograph, he says.

WITNESSES TO TESTIFY ON MANY ALIBIS

TO SUPPORT HENRY STEVENS, IN HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE

HOUSEKEEPER SAYS SHE COOKED DINNER FOR HIM IN LAVALLETTE

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Court Room, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 22.—A succession of witnesses came to court today to testify in support of the detailed alibi of Henry Stevens, which forms his defense to the murder charges against him in the Hall-Mills case.

Mrs. Anna Evanson told the jury that on the night Stevens was supposed to have been at New Brunswick while the murders took place, he was in Lavallette, N. J., his home. She cooked his dinner that night, she said.

Howard Price of West Philadelphia testified he saw Stevens enroute to the beach at Lavallette at 9:55 P. M. the night of the murders. Stevens was going fishing, he said.

Mrs. Mary Applegate said she saw Stevens fishing that night and saw him weigh the now famous bluefish, caught by her husband which Stevens previously testified weighed six pounds.

Arthur Applegate then told the jury of catching the fish and how Stevens weighed it for him.

These four witnesses had given detailed corroboration of Stevens' story of his whereabouts the night Mrs. Eleanor Mills and Dr. Edward W. Hall were killed.

"Was Mrs. Stevens home on the night of September 14, 1922?" asked Clarence Case of defense counsel of Mrs. Evanson.

"No," said the witness.

"Who cooked dinner in her absence?"

"I did."

"Was Henry Stevens there that night?"

"Yes."

"When was the last you saw of him that night?"

"He left to go fishing at about 6:45 o'clock."

"What did you see of him the next day, Friday?"

"I saw him around all day. I cooked his lunch and dinner."

Before Mrs. Evanson was excused Simpson asked her if her 19-year-old daughter had been cared for by the Stevens family since the murder.

"She has not," said Mrs. Evanson proudly and she left the witness stand to be followed by Howard Price of West Philadelphia, a summer visitor at Lavallette.

His house was one block from the Stevens home, Price said.

On the murder night Price said he had seen Henry Stevens on his way to the beach at 9:55 o'clock.

He remembered the date, he said, because he had an automobile accident on September 10. On Saturday he received a post card from an insurance company.

Price produced the post card on cross examination and Simpson had it marked for identification.

Price admitted on cross examination that he had not visited Lavallette on a Thursday before the murder night, it being his custom to visit the town at week ends.

QUEEN MARIE HAS DAY OF MIXED PLEASURE

EXCURSION MARKED BY CONSIDERABLE HAPPINESS AND MUCH ANGUISH

ROYAL PARTY BOARDS LINER BERENGARIA TOMORROW NIGHT

By JOHN MONTGOMERY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Tuxedo, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Queen Marie will enjoy the next to last day of her American visit today, an excursion marked by considerable pleasure and a great deal of anguish.

When the royal party boards the liner Berengaria tomorrow night it will be with mixed feelings of joy and sorrow over the tour of this country.

She has been informed by her government that the Rumanian press has not been altogether kindly in its resentment of her American visit, particularly since the squabbles among her party began on the west coast and for a time threatened to disrupt her journey. Her early return is therefore considered most wise and is said to have the full support of Bucharest officials.

The queen was received here by a frenzied populace but by a frigid government, and throughout her entire visit, she was unable to reconcile the two welcomes.

The Rumanian delegation which formed her immediate party felt that the bitter rivalry between her American conductors would affect her political standing in Rumania and merely shrugged their shoulders with an "I told you so" air when the battles were hottest and the American press was ridiculing the comic opera situation aboard her special train.

The fight during the whole trip centered between Colonel John H. Carroll, who was in charge of the tour, and Ira Nelson Morris in charge of entertainment.

Both were accusing each other of furthering themselves at the expense of her majesty.

Tonight the royal party will dine formally at the home of Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, with other guests, any two of which could pay Rumania's present war debt.

In other words Queen Marie will dine with the biggest millionaires of the country in one of the last American social functions. She will lunch with Mrs. William B. Leeds and afterward visit the tomb of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay.

Prince Nicholas is expected in New York at noon after a visit to Detroit and Cleveland.

PROPOSAL ENCOUNTERS SKEPTICISM

RELATES TO GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION OF MEDICINAL LIQUOR PRODUCTION

ALSO REFERS TO DISTRIBUTION, AS SUGGESTED BY DRY CHIEF ANDREWS

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, Nov. 22.—The proposal of Federal Dry Chief Andrews for government supervision of medicinal liquor production and distribution encountered skepticism today from congressional wets and dries alike.

Privately some dries expressed doubt as to whether congress would sanction such a measure while wet leaders foresaw in the proposition "the first official recognition that the Volstead act is inadequate."

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat, Montana, ardent dry, declared he thought it "would be worth while to make the experiment" which Andrews proposes for government purchase of distilleries and stocks, through a "private" corporation set up by the government.

"There may be some question as to the efficacy of the proposal because it does not include government distribution of industrial alcohol as well as medicinal liquors," Walsh said.

"I believe the dry senators in congress will accept the recommendation of Andrews who knows more about the situation than they do."

The Anti-Saloon League issued a statement in which it commented dubiously upon the proposal saying: "The league is delaying final action on its attitude toward opening distilleries because the facts concerning it are not available. Whether the United States should renew the manufacture of whisky here or buy it abroad as the law provides, is an open question."

LAKE CARGO FREIGHT RATES ARE DISPUTED

NEWS REEL FILM FLASHES TO GAIN WIDEST KIND OF PUBLICITY

SHOWN THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES AND MANY FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Pathe News Reel, flashes of the Brainerd paving celebration, sponsored by Finkelstein & Ruben, Minneapolis, through its energetic manager, Theodore L. Hays, will be shown at the Lyceum Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The film was taken by the Ray Bell company. Mr. Bell, the photographer, is well acquainted with this section of Minnesota. He photographed the summer resorts of the M. & I. and Northern Pacific railways some four years ago which included Breezy Point Lodge. He made the reel of the Northern Pacific railway shops store department and their method of receiving and filling orders, etc., the film being shown at a national convention at Atlantic City. He photographed a fishing film on Leech lake.

So when the hurry-up call came from the New York offices of the Pathe News Reel to "get" the Brainerd celebration, Mr. Bell hopped on a bus, got his material in spite of rainy weather and returned home on the 4:30 o'clock afternoon bus.

The publicity committee of the Brainerd Paving Celebration had a bad quarter of an hour on the day of the celebration with its downpouring of rain. But thanks to modern photography, especially news reel work, which has a way of registering regardless of weather conditions, some fine pictures were secured.

Flashes are expected to reveal Governor Theodore Christianson, visiting mayors and other celebrities and local committeemen, the parade, and the crowd pouring into the new $25,000 building of the State Highway Department.

Pathe News reel secures nationwide distribution and is also shown in many foreign countries. It gives Brainerd, the paving, etc., wonderful publicity. It is hoped there will be a hearty response by the public to see the news reel.

MIDWEST WATERWAY BOOSTERS MEETING AT ST. LOUIS TODAY

ONE THOUSAND MEMBERS OF MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ASSOCIATION PRESENT

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE HERBERT HOOVER IS PRINCIPAL SPEAKER

By MAX BUCKINGHAM
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
St. Louis, Nov. 22.—One thousand midwest waterway boosters met here at the annual meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association today and heard Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover deplore the litigation and quarrels which stand in the road of waterways improvement.

Hoover is the principal speaker before the meeting, although a notable list of waterways advisers including R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture; Brigadier General T. Q. Ashburn and Representative Wallace Dempsey are on the program for the two days' conference.

Hoover said that all of the litigation and quarrelling about waterways would cause "feeling but they do not produce water."

"Quarrels concerning water seem quickly to go from the realm of engineering to the realm of emotion and from the realm of emotion quickly to translate themselves into the realm of litigation and political action," he said.

"But lawyers, courts or legislative debate cannot cure climatic lowering of the levels in the lakes—these are engineering jobs."

For the most part Hoover's speech was a technical discussion of what should be done to improve the waterways of the country.

"A unified program for completing the whole Mississippi system is necessary. The capital cost will not exceed $120,000,000 beyond present appropriations and not more than five years in time," the secretary of commerce said.

There are more than 12,000 miles of potentially navigable waterways in 29 states, Hoover said.

These waterways cannot only be inter-connected with themselves but they also lead from the Great Lakes to the sea, both at the Gulf of Mexico and the North Atlantic, he declared.

"Our government has worked at deepening these channels in spots and isolated projects for many years," he declared, "but in our national policies what we have missed is the idea that to make a real successful transportation system requires a large inter-connected system of trunk lines from seaboard with great feeders from our lateral rivers and their consequent widespread and diversified traffic."

NEW JERSEY LAD CRAZED, SHOOTS TWO

Bridgetown, N. J., Nov. 22.—(UP)—Linwood Ware, aged 22, opened fire with an automatic pistol at a group seated around the breakfast table in his parents' home today killing two and perhaps fatally wounding a third.

The dead were William Candy and wife, both aged 65, who boarded with Ware's parents.

Mrs. Madeline Maywell, aged 26, Ware's sister, was so severely wounded her recovery was considered doubtful.

FALL AND DOHENY FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

ARE CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD GOVERNMENT

CHARGE MADE THAT OIL LEASE INFLUENCED BY ALLEGED BRIBE

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, Nov. 22.—The first oil scandal criminal case went on trial today.

Albert Bacon Fall and Edward Laurence Doheny, are fighting for their liberty against charges of conspiracy to defraud the government which charges the $100,000,000 lease of the Elk Hills, Cal., naval reserve was influenced by an alleged $100,000 bribe, passed from Doheny to Fall.

Fall, secretary of the interior, who made the lease, a grizzled old New Mexico ranchman, politician and jurist, and Doheny, florid and energetic little multi-millionaire, face maximum sentences of two years in federal penitentiary if convicted and $10,000 fines.

Selection of a jury complicated by mysterious investigations into personal lives of the 104 men on District of Columbia supreme panels, may take several days.

The trial is expected to last at least one month, perhaps several. The indictment was returned 18 months ago and is one of five against the principals in the scandals divulged by the Walsh senate committee in 1923-24.

Former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, four United States senators and one former senator, Ed B. McLean, millionaire publisher of Washington and Cincinnati, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt and Theodore Roosevelt are among more than 100 witnesses summoned by the government. Employees of the New York bank, which gave the $100,000 cash to Doheny's son to bring to Fall also have been called.

The defense will be built around an effort to show the transaction was entirely a friendly one, growing out of the two men's alleged association of 30 years, since they met as struggling oil man and miner.

Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special government counsel in the case, today stated that no investigation of the personal affairs of the prospective jurors had been authorized by them. One juror reported his relatives had been asked if he were a member of the Ku Klux Klan, others as to lodge affiliations, property owned and marital state by telephone and personal calls.

Defense attorneys, who are headed by Frank J. Hogan, likewise knew nothing of the inquiry and District Attorney Peyton Gordon, who is aiding Pomerene and Roberts in this case, started an immediate investigation, no developments in which have been made public.

Doheny is a member of the Catholic church and Fall is a Protestant.

The four senators subpoenaed are Lenroot, Wisconsin; Walsh, Montana; Smoot, Utah, and Harrell, Oklahoma. The former senator is Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma. All were members of the Walsh senate oil committee of which Lenroot was chairman.

The names of 71 witnesses have been made public by Pomerene and Roberts. Others will be called as surprise witnesses, partly to prevent possible escape from the country before summons are served.

Defense witnesses have not been named. Doheny will be the chief witness in his own defense. Fall may be called, but it is deemed improbable.

The court was called to order at 10:05 A. M.

Doheny and Fall, seated behind their counsel, joked and talked with attorneys and court attaches.

Harry Sinclair, oil magnate under indictment with Fall, in a similar case, was represented by Counsel Hoover.

The court set about selecting the jury.

The defense sprang a surprise when it asked prospective jurors if they had read "Revelry," a novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, which deals in part with a governmental oil scandal similar in some details to the Elk Hills-Teapot Dome case.

LEGAL BATTLE NOW SEEMS IN PROSPECT

THE FARMER-LABOR CANDIDATE GIVES NOTICE TO SECRETARY OF STATE

WEFALD TAKES ACTION AFTER 3 DAYS' CONFERENCE WITH HIS LAWYER

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—(UP)—A legal battle over the Minnesota congressional seat which republicans captured from farmer-laborites in the general election on November 2 was started today.

Representative Knud Wefald, farmer-labor, gave notice to Secretary of State Mike Holm that he intended to contest the election of C. G. Selvig, republican, as representative from the Ninth Minnesota congressional district, under the state corrupt practices act.

Notice was sent through James Witherow, of Moorhead, attorney for Wefald, after a three day conference between Witherow and Wefald at Crookston, home town of Representative Selvig.

Secretary of State Holm's office admitted to the United Press that it had received the notice of contest from Witherow.

Witherow said the contest would be based on certain printed pamphlets, which Selvig is alleged to have circulated during the campaign, charging that Wefald voted for the immigration quota restriction act in the house.

Wefald was the only one of the farmer-labor delegation of three unseated in the last election on the face of returns. The official vote unofficially compiled gave Selvig a majority of 962. The vote as announced by Secretary of State Holm was: Selvig, 33,477; Wefald, 32,505.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 22.—Despite notice of contest sent to Secretary of State Mike Holm at St. Paul, the only comment forthcoming here today from Representative Knud Wefald was a broad intimation that he would attempt to overthrow the election of C. G. Selvig as representative from the ninth Minnesota congressional district.

James Witherow of Moorhead, attorney for Wefald, has been here with Wefald for the last three days considering the contest.

Wefald in an interview with the United Press declined to discuss the nature of the charges to be filed but did not deny the possibility of a contest.

WITNESSES TO TESTIFY ON MANY ALIBIS

TO SUPPORT HENRY STEVENS, IN HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE

HOUSEKEEPER SAYS SHE COOKED DINNER FOR HIM IN LAVALLETTE

By PAUL W. WHITE (United Press Staff Correspondent) Court Room, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 22.—A succession of witnesses came to court today to testify in support of the detailed alibi of Henry Stevens, which forms his defense to the murder charges against him in the Hall-Mills case.

Mrs. Anna Evanson told the jury that on the night Stevens was supposed to have been at New Brunswick while the murders took place, he was in Lavallette, N. J., his home. She cooked his dinner that night, she said.

Howard Price of West Philadelphia testified he saw Stevens enroute to the beach at Lavallette at 9:55 P. M. the night of the murders. Stevens was going fishing, he said.

Arthur Applegate then told the jury of catching the fish and how Stevens weighed it for him.

These four witnesses had given detailed corroboration of Stevens' story of his whereabouts the night Mrs. Eleanor Mills and Dr. Edward W. Hall were killed.

"Was Mrs. Stevens home on the night of September 14, 1922?" asked Clarence Case of defense counsel of Mrs. Evanson.

"Who cooked dinner in her absence?"

"I did."

"Was Henry Stevens there that night?"

"Yes."

"When was the last you saw of him that night?"

"He left to go fishing at about 6:45 o'clock."

"What did you see of him the next day, Friday?"

"I saw him around all day. I cooked his lunch and dinner."

Before Mrs. Evanson was excused Simpson asked her if her 19-year-old daughter had been cared for by the Stevens family since the murder.

"She has not," said Mrs. Evanson proudly and she left the witness stand to be followed by Howard Price of West Philadelphia, a summer visitor at Lavallette.

His house was one block from the Stevens home, Price said.

On the murder night Price said he had seen Henry Stevens on his way to the beach at 9:55 o'clock.

He remembered the date, he said, because he had an automobile accident on September 10. On Saturday he received a post card from an insurance company.

Price produced the post card on cross examination and Simpson had it marked for identification.

Price admitted on cross examination that he had not visited Lavallette on a Thursday before the murder night, it being his custom to visit the town at week ends.

PROPOSAL ENCOUNTERS SKEPTICISM

RELATES TO GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION OF MEDICINAL LIQUOR PRODUCTION

ALSO REFERS TO DISTRIBUTION, AS SUGGESTED BY DRY CHIEF ANDREWS

By PAUL R. MALLON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Nov. 22.—The proposal of Federal Dry Chief Andrews for government supervision of medicinal liquor production and distribution encountered skepticism today from congressional wets and drys alike.

Privately some drys expressed doubt as to whether congress would sanction such a measure while wet leaders foresaw in the proposition "the first official recognition that the Volstead act is inadequate."

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat, Montana, ardent dry, declared he thought it "would be worth while to make the experiment" which Andrews proposes for government purchase of distilleries and stocks, through a "private" corporation set up by the government.

"There may be some question as to the efficacy of the proposal because it does not include government distribution of industrial alcohol as well as medicinal liquors," Walsh said.

"I believe the dry senators in congress will accept the recommendation of Andrews who knows more about the situation than they do."

The Anti-Saloon League issued a statement in which it commented dubiously upon the proposal saying:

"The league is delaying final action on its attitude toward opening distilleries because the facts concerning it are not available. Whether the United States should renew the manufacture of whisky here or buy it abroad as the law provides, is an open question."

Hays, will be shown at the Lyceum Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The film was taken by the Ray Bell company. Mr. Bell, the photographer, is well acquainted with this section of Minnesota. He photographed the summer resorts of the M. & I. and Northern Pacific railways some four years ago which included Breezy Point Lodge. He made the reel of the Northern Pacific railway shops store department and their method of receiving and filling orders, etc., the film being shown at a national convention at Atlantic City. He photographed a fishing film on Leech lake.

So when the hurry-up call came from the New York offices of the Pathe News reel to "get" the Brainerd celebration, Mr. Bell hopped on a bus, got his material in spite of rainy weather and returned home on the 4:30 o'clock afternoon bus.

The publicity committee of the Brainerd Paving Celebration had a bad quarter of an hour on the day of the celebration with its downpouring of rain. But thanks to modern photography, especially news reel work, which has a way of registering regardless of weather conditions, some fine pictures were secured.

Flashes are expected to reveal Governor Theodore Christianson, visiting mayors and other celebrities and local committeemen, the parade, and the crowd pouring into the new $25,000 building of the State Highway Department.

Pathe News reel secures nationwide distribution and is also shown in many foreign countries. It gives Brainerd, the paving, etc., wonderful publicity. It is hoped there will be a hearty response by the public to see the news reel.

MIDWEST WATERWAY BOOSTERS MEETING AT ST. LOUIS TODAY

ONE THOUSAND MEMBERS OF MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ASSOCIATION PRESENT

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE HERBERT HOOVER IS PRINCIPAL SPEAKER

By MAX BUCKINGHAM (United Press Staff Correspondent)

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—One thousand midwest waterway boosters met here at the annual meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association today and heard Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover deplore the litigation and quarrels which stand in the road of waterways improvement.

Hoover is the principal speaker before the meeting, although a notable list of waterways advisers including R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture; Brigadier General T. Q. Ashburn and Representative Wallace Dempsey are on the program for the two days' conference.

Hoover said that all of the litigation and quarreling about waterways would cause "feeling but they do not produce water."

"Quarrels concerning water seem quickly to go from the realm of engineering to the realm of emotion and from the realm of emotion quickly to translate themselves into the realm of litigation and political action," he said.

"But lawyers, courts or legislative debate cannot cure climatic lowering of the levels in the lakes—these are engineering jobs."

For the most part Hoover's speech was a technical discussion of what should be done to improve the waterways of the country.

"A unified program for completing the whole Mississippi system is necessary. The capital cost will not exceed $120,000,000 beyond present appropriations and not more than five years in time," the secretary of commerce said.

There are more than 12,000 miles of potentially navigable waterways in 20 states, Hoover said.

These waterways cannot only be interconnected with themselves but they also lead from the Great Lakes to the sea, both at the Gulf of Mexico and the North Atlantic, he declared.

"Our government has worked at deepening these channels in spots and isolated projects for many years," he declared, "but in our national policies what we have missed is the idea that to make a real successful transportation system requires a large interconnected system of trunk lines from seaboard with great feeders from our lateral rivers and their consequent widespread and diversified traffic."

NEW JERSEY LAD CRAZED, SHOOTS TWO

Bridgetown, N. J., Nov. 22.—(UP)—Linwood Ware, aged 22, opened fire with an automatic pistol at a group seated around the breakfast table in his parents' home today killing two and perhaps fatally wounding a third.

He then fled the house but was captured without resistance a few blocks away.

The dead were William Candy and wife, both aged 65, who boarded with Ware's parents. Mrs. Madeline Maywell, aged 26, Ware's sister, was so severely wounded her recovery was considered doubtful.

FALL AND DOHENY FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

ARE CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD GOVERNMENT

CHARGE MADE THAT OIL LEASE INFLUENCED BY ALLEGED BRIBE

By HERBERT LITTLE (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Nov. 22.—The first oil scandal criminal case went on trial today.

Albert Bacon Fall and Edward Laurence Doheny, are fighting for their liberty against charges of conspiracy to defraud the government which charges the $100,000,000 lease of the Elk Hills, Cal., naval reserve was influenced by an alleged $100,000 bribe, passed from Doheny to Fall.

Fall, secretary of the interior, who made the lease, a grizzled old New Mexico ranchman, politician and jurist, and Doheny, florid and energetic little multi-millionaire, face maximum sentences of two years in federal penitentiary if convicted and $10,000 fines.

Selection of a jury complicated by mysterious investigations into personal lives of the 104 men on District of Columbia supreme panels, may take several days.

The trial is expected to last at least one month, perhaps several. The indictment was returned 18 months ago and is one of five against the principals in the scandals divulged by the Walsh senate committee in 1923-24.

Former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, four United States senators and one former senator, Ed. B. McLean, millionaire publisher of Washington and Cincinnati, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt and Theodore Roosevelt are among more than 100 witnesses summoned by the government. Employees of the New York bank, which gave the $100,000 cash to Doheny's son to bring to Fall also have been called.

The defense will be built around an effort to show the transaction was entirely a friendly one, growing out of the two men's alleged association of 30 years, since they met as struggling oil man and miner.

Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special government counsel in the case, today stated that no investigation of the personal affairs of the prospective jurors had been authorized by them. One juror reported his relatives had been asked if he were a member of the Ku Klux Klan, others as to lodge affiliations, property owned and marital state by telephone and personal calls.

Defense attorneys, who are headed by Frank J. Hogan, likewise knew nothing of the inquiry and District Attorney Peyton Gordon, who is aiding Pomerene and Roberts in this case, started an immediate investigation, no developments in which have been made public.

Doheny is a member of the Catholic church and Fall is a Protestant. The four senators subpoenaed are Lenroot, Wisconsin; Walsh, Montana; Smoot, Utah, and Harrell, Oklahoma. The former senator is Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma. All were members of the Walsh senate oil committee of which Lenroot was chairman.

The names of 71 witnesses have been made public by Pomerene and Roberts. Others will be called as surprise witnesses, partly to prevent possible escape from the country before summons are served.

Defense witnesses have not been named. Doheny will be the chief witness in his own defense. Fall may be called, but it is deemed improbable.

The court was called to order at 10:05 A. M.

Doheny and Fall, seated behind their counsel, joked and talked with attorneys and court attaches.

Harry Sinclair, oil magnate under indictment with Fall, in a similar case, was represented by Counsel Hoover.

The court set about selecting the jury.

The defense sprang a surprise when it asked prospective jurors if they had read "Revelry," a novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, which deals in part with a governmental oil scandal similar in some details to the Elk Hills-Teapot Dome case. (Continued on Page 3)

FAILED TO QUALIFY
AS PERFECT WOMAN

I remember Belinda. She was arguing with another young woman about the car fare. "Let me pay," said Belinda; and she paid. "There," I mused, "is a perfect woman, nobly planned."

I met her shortly after that, and she came through many a test.

She could write a decent letter. She did. Lots of them. To me, too. She wrote the best letters I ever read. They were intelligent, humorous, and—why shouldn't I tell the truth?—ardent. Fervid is nearer. Caudescence is not far off. And that is how I lost her.

"P. S.," she wrote, "Burn this letter and all of them."

A few weeks later Belinda said "At the rate I write you, my letters must fill a large drawer by this time."

"Why," I said, "I burn them. They're all burned."

"I never want to see you again as long as I live," she said. "Good-by."

And my good-by was the last communication between me and Belinda.

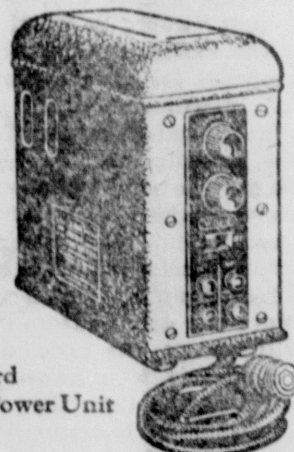

—Franklin P. Adams, in the Kansas City Star.

Trouble With Reforms

"The trouble with this reform," he said, "and the same trouble marks a good many labor and communist and other reforms, is that it's based on selfishness."

"It reminds me of a little girl who was thinking about life."

"Mamma," she said thoughtfully, "why can't the candy shop man and the toy shop man call for orders every morning the same as the butcher and grocer do?"

STOCK CO. ENTERS LITTER IN CONTEST

Litter of 12 Pigs Weigh 2,901
Pounds Stand Good
Chance to Win

IN STATE CONTEST

Pigs Are of the Grade Chester
Whites Class; Are
Six Months Old

A litter of 12 grade Chester White pigs, weighing 2,901 pounds has been entered by the Echo Stock Farm Co. in the State Ton Litter contest being conducted by the Agricultural College of the University of Minnesota.

Announcement of the winner of the contest is expected this month.

The pigs when weighed in, being littered on May 18, the pigs have been under the care of M. G. Viste who fed them corn, bran, shorts and other nourishing feed.

Originally, the litter comprised 17 pigs and had not five of the pigs died, through the sow being unable to take care of them all, the litter would undoubtedly have weighed the greatest. As it is the 12 pigs stand a very good chance to win the contest. The contest is based on weight alone.

Next year the Echo Stock Farm Co. plan to enter the contest with their pure bred Duroc Jerseys, of which they have a fine herd of hogs. The farm has at present 35 hogs.

The 12 pigs entered in the contest have been sent to market at South St. Paul.

The Echo Stock Farm Co. is managed by O. H. Scott.

LIBRARY BENEFIT PROGRAM TONIGHT

Special Entertainment Features Program at High School Auditorium

MEN TO SERVE LUNCH

Teachers Have Been Coaching Children in Acts for Several Weeks

Attention is called to the entertainment this evening at the high school for the benefit of the public library. No effort has been spared to make the program an interesting and varied one.

All who come will be more than repaid for the expenditure of time and money, for the various acts will be very pretty and well done, as the teachers in the different buildings have been coaching the children for several weeks.

Remember that the gentlemen on the library board are to serve the lunch right after the entertainment is over, and that those who wish lunch go from the gym to the cooking room, where the men have been laboring diligently to prepare good food.

FIRST OIL SCANDAL CRIMINAL CASE NOW ON TRIAL TODAY

The defense also asked members of the jury panel if they had heard a radio address by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, on the oil cases.

Paul Allen, restaurant proprietor, the first venireman examined, was tentatively accepted by both sides. He said he had not read "Revelry," heard the Walsh address nor read recent newspaper articles on the case. Henry D. Byers, driver, for an express company, made similar answers and was tentatively accepted by both sides.

Thomas R. Carey, negro bricklayer, said he had read articles on the oil case but was unbiased. He was tentatively accepted.

George Cobb, railroad clerk, was next examined. He said he had read much of the case several years ago, but nothing recently. He considered himself unprejudiced.

"No one has said anything to you about this case?" Frank J. Hogan of counsel for Doherty asked.

"No, sir."

"Nor to any member of your family?"

"No, sir."

Charges were made Saturday that attempts had been made to obtain information about prospective jury-men's business, social and fraternal connections.

FAMOUS CITIES ON PLAINS OF CHALDEE

Flourishing Centers Long Before Babylon.

Babylon was already more than twenty centuries old when Alexander conquered it, drank too much of its wine, took a fever and died. A thousand years earlier still, Babylon itself being still unbuilt and undreamed of, there were other cities on the plains of Chaldee; Lagash and Erech and Kish and Umma and that famous Ur of the Chaldees which alone among them lived on in men's memories because it chanced to have been the traditional birthplace of the Jewish hero, Abraham. Able priest-kings ruled those ancient cities; Gudea, the architect; Eannatum, the conqueror; Entemna, the builder of canals; that first and greatest Sargon, king of kings, whose spirit inspired the gray, pathetic little man whom Mr. H. G. Wells created for one of his recent heroes. No land in the world has a longer or more glorious history than has Babylonia, for all that its earlier scenes have long been lost.

New light on these earliest scenes has turned up, however, from a small mound of ruins called by the Arabs Jemdet Nasr, sixteen miles from the site of ancient Kish. Here Professor Langdon of Oxford found a few very ancient tablets bearing crude inscriptions. Photographs of these (unpublishable as yet, because Doctor Langdon's illness has delayed his own publication of them) disclose what is undoubtedly the most archaic form of Babylonian writing yet discovered. Moreover, the Jemdet Nasr finds include pottery and metal objects also indicating great age. They resemble similar ancient objects found previously in Persia, in Chinese Turkestan and even in Egypt. Jemdet Nasr yielded, for example, a small jug shaped like a pig; the first animal-shaped pottery to be discovered in Babylonia, although common enough in Persia, in Turkestan and at several sites in Asia Minor.

The new finds provide increased reason to imagine that Babylon, Egypt and other civilizations of the ancient East were underlain and preceded by a single widespread culture from which all of them are growth and modifications. Neither in Babylonia nor elsewhere has the homeland of this dimly seen, earlier civilization been identified. What we find are its colonies, the seeds it sowed in other lands. These surround, as it happens, exactly that area to which the ancient Biblical writers assigned the Garden of Eden, the mountainous region south and southwest of the Caspian sea. Archeological science is perhaps not yet ready to accept the Garden of Eden story as historical, but the trend is unmistakably in that direction.

Good Nature and Health

A Japanese girl, Fumiko Mitani, who won the Sarah Streeter cup of Mount Holyoke college as the senior passing the best physical examination, attributes her good health to exercise, but her fellow students claim that her good humor and ready laughter keep her healthy.

As a child she went barefoot to school and it was so cold that she had to run all the time. On one occasion the class was taken to see the chrysanthemums in a neighboring village, five miles away. They ran all the way, but were not tired when they arrived, says Miss Mitani. She cannot sit straight in chairs, but prefers to sit on her heels as she did in Japan.—Hygeia Magazine.

The Bluff

Gordon Woodridge, the millionaire Topeka bibliophile, said on his return from a visit to New York:

"The attempts to elevate the New York state—the little theaters and so on—are crude bluff mostly. They remind me of the new Shakespeare club."

"I said to the treasurer of this organization: 'I understand your new Shakespeare club's a great success.' 'Great success? You bet your sweet life it's a great success,' said the treasurer warmly. 'Why, brother, we accumulated enough in fines for nonattendance during the first month to take us all to a box party at the musical success, "Love in Lingerie."'

Possible to Live Forever?

Why do we need to die? Interest in this age-old question has been renewed, says Popular Science Monthly, with the discovery by Prof. Max Hartmann of Berlin of a microscopic one-cell creature which apparently can be made to live forever. By careful treatment, which includes pruning off portions of the creature's body at intervals, Professor Hartmann claims to have kept it alive for many times the length of its normal life. If the same results could be obtained with human beings, he says, our lifetime could be extended indefinitely.

::: Will Discuss National Petroleum Problems :::

THE annual convention of the American Petroleum Institute at Tulsa, December 7, 8 and 9, will bring together the largest and most representative gathering of leaders in the petroleum industry that has ever been held. From 1,500 to 2,000 chiefs of corporations, technical experts, scientific authorities, state and national officers, economists and engineers, will consider in the broadest way the questions that relate to permanently supplying fuel to America's 20,000,000 motor cars, and meeting the multitude of other demands on petroleum. Officers and directors of the Institute are shown in the illustration. All rank among the leaders of the industry.

President Coolidge recognized these problems when he created the Federal Oil Conservation Board, nearly two years ago, and commissioned it to study them. The board's report recognized the desirability of a close co-operation between the industry and the government in planning constructive, practical measures. It declared that these must rest chiefly on the initiative of the industry itself.

Since that report was issued, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, a member of the Oil Conservation Board, has declared emphatically in favor of such modification of the anti-trust laws as will open the way to desirable co-operations within the industry, prevent wastes and encourage economies.

The aspects of demand, supply, future sources of oil, possible substitutes for it, etc., are at the top of all thought concerning the industry. They will give direction and definite purpose to the considerations at the Tulsa convention, which promises to mark a significant advance toward understanding and mutually helpful co-operations between business and government. Secretary Hoover, speaking on this point, said the other day:

"The way to do business in America today is to do it with glass pockets, and show the public what you really have, and what you really are doing. You may take the case of several industries, which have adopted this policy, and observe the very satisfactory results which have been obtained.

"I believe that the oil industry is clean and has nothing to fear from a program such as these other industries have adopted. When one considers the widespread distribution of gasoline and the very limited amount of profit in a gallon of gasoline, surely not over 2 cents a gallon considering everything, it is surprising. It is a wonderfully distributed product.

"You have the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute coming to Tulsa in December, and if members of this body can get together and formulate some plan regarding modification of the Sherman anti-trust act, as applied to drilling flush fields, and properly present this plan, I see no reason why it should not receive favorable action at the hands of Congress."

OTHER BOOKS KEPT

ETHEL QUITE BUSY

Mrs. Langdon Carmack was making a plea for a superior line of reading for young people. "Our present-day literature, for the most part, is not fit or young people," she declared, "and I take no stock in the defense offered by writers and publishers that they merely supply an insistent demand."

"People do not succumb to temptation until they are tempted, and this applies to reading as much as to anything else. But once a certain appetite is created a demand is created also and we are fast turning all our young people into girls like Ethel."

"Ethel," said her mother one evening, "here is a book I think you should read."

An appropriation of $500,000, to be used exclusively in research work, the realizations from which are expected to usher in a new era for the use of gas in industry, has been made by the American Gas association. This sum is to be collected and expended over a period of five years, said Alexander Forward, its secretary-manager.

The Invisible Foundation

"Modern industry is not built upon a foundation of brick and mortar, stone and steel. Its real foundation is an invisible fabric of ideas"—says J. H. Van Deventer in "Industrial Management."

On this invisible foundation the business of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been built. The history of the growth of this Company is a history of the development of ideas.

From the beginning, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has realized the importance of this invisible foundation.

It was among the first organizations to establish a research laboratory adequately equipped for scientific investigation and study—a place where ideas might be encouraged and developed and tested.

In this laboratory men of initiative and scientific training have been brought together to work out the problems of petroleum and make this great natural resource of increasing service to mankind.

In the seclusion of this laboratory, Standard Oil Company (Indiana) ideas have originated which have revolutionized the entire industry.

For example, in the research laboratory of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) were developed the first processes for producing gasoline by cracking, which have more than doubled the yield obtained from crude oil by former methods.

These processes were leased to competitors and thus benefited the entire industry and ultimately all the motorists of the country.

Recently a new theory of scientific lubrication has been worked out in the research laboratory of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

This discovery has resulted in the development of a new motor oil which solves many of the lubricating problems that have baffled experts for years. The far reaching importance of this discovery to motorists cannot be overstated.

These are but two examples of revolutionary ideas originated in the laboratory of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) which have been converted into important benefits to every motorist in the Middle West.

Every product of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is the result of careful scientific research backed by experience.

Upon this invisible foundation of ideas and scientific research the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has built the sturdy structure of its vast organization to serve the 30 million people of the Middle West.

Gas Research Work

An appropriation of $500,000, to be used exclusively in research work, the realizations from which are expected to usher in a new era for the use of gas in industry, has been made by the American Gas Association. This sum is to be collected and expended over a period of five years, said Alexander Forward, its secretary-manager.

The Invisible Foundation

"Modern industry is not built upon a foundation of brick and mortar, stone and steel. Its real foundation is an invisible fabric of ideas"—says J. H. Van Deventer in "Industrial Management."

On this invisible foundation the business of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been built. The history of the growth of this Company is a history of the development of ideas.

From the beginning, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has realized the importance of this invisible foundation.

It was among the first organizations to establish a research laboratory adequately equipped for scientific investigation and study—a place where ideas might be encouraged and developed and tested.

In this laboratory men of initiative and scientific training have been brought together to work out the problems of petroleum and make this great natural resource of increasing service to mankind.

In the seclusion of this laboratory, Standard Oil Company (Indiana) ideas have originated which have revolutionized the entire industry.

For example, in the research laboratory of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) were developed the first processes for producing gasoline by cracking, which have more than doubled the yield obtained from crude oil by former methods.

These processes were leased to competitors and thus benefited the entire industry and ultimately all the motorists of the country.

Recently a new theory of scientific lubrication has been worked out in the research laboratory of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

This discovery has resulted in the development of a new motor oil which solves many of the lubricating problems that have baffled experts for years. The far reaching importance of this discovery to motorists cannot be overstated.

These are but two examples of revolutionary ideas originated in the laboratory of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) which have been converted into important benefits to every motorist in the Middle West.

Every product of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is the result of careful scientific research backed by experience.

Upon this invisible foundation of ideas and scientific research the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has built the sturdy structure of its vast organization to serve the 30 million people of the Middle West.

BRAINERD TO DALLAS, TEXAS, BY PAVED ROAD

The thing that caught the attention of all Minnesota and the Northwest, at our recent Paving Celebration, was the telegram sent by Harrison & Start, Kansas City, Mo., realtors, who have large landed interests near Brainerd and are developing their lake holdings. With central offices at Kansas City, Mo., they are working constantly to interest the Midwest in our lakes and recreational facilities.

The Minneapolis Journal gave the Brainerd-Dallas cement highway of 1928 the lead in their follow up story of the Paving Celebration. The State Highway Department asked the Publicity committee of the Paving Celebration for further information and a copy of the telegram, etc., was sent them.

This week's bulletin of the State Highway Department, mailed to at least one paper in each town of the State, and therefore widely quoted, states:

"An all-weather road, mostly paved, from Brainerd, Minn., to Dallas, Texas, is assured for 1928, according to a telegram from Kansas City read at the pavement celebration at Brainerd last week. There is an all-weather road, mostly paved, in Minnesota, three unsurfaced gaps totalling 85 miles between the Minnesota line and Kansas City, 30 miles of dirt south of Kansas City and a few unsurfaced stretches in Oklahoma. Highway officials in the states affected have announced that all the dirt gaps will be partly paved in 1927 and completely paved in 1928.

"The fact that any unsurfaced stretches exist at all on an interstate artery of this kind, again calls attention to the advantages of the Minnesota plan and the difficulty in getting a uniformly all-weather road where the state must depend on county financing for building primary roads. In the states named it seems to be common practice to jump from dirt to concrete.

"Minnesota attempts to gravel every important road as rapidly as possible instead of leaving a dirt surface until paving funds are available. While Commissioner C. M. Babcock has always contended that it would have been economy to pave some of the more heavily traveled routes long ago, he believes in giving a serviceable gravel road until funds are available for something better."

Harrison & Start started something when they broached the idea of the cement highway from Brainerd to Dallas, Texas, and by the way, it passes through Kansas City, Mo. They have joined with the Brainerd Paving Celebration publicity committee to give extended notice all along the route from Brainerd to Texas.

STATE PUBLIC SCHOOL "MELON" IS SLICED

The biggest State public school "melon" in the history of Minnesota was sliced this week when Ray P. Chase, State Auditor, affixed his signature to eighty-seven warrants covering annual and supplemental school aid. The warrants issued represented a total of $6,163,028.40.

These warrants, bearing the signature of Mr. Chase and the State Treasurer, will be mailed to the various county treasurers as soon as the auditors of the same report their November tax settlements.

This particular State "melon" is listed on the State Auditor's books as "special aid to state public schools" and under the law is distributed annually among the counties of the State. As soon as each county reports its November tax settlements, a warrant is issued by the State Auditor, the county treasurer of which deducts the amount transmitted to the State.

As stated, this year's distribution of special school aid is the largest in the history of the State, exceeding 1925 by $73,789.76.

The amount to be distributed among the school districts of Crow Wing county is $106,891.23, a check for which will be mailed to the county treasurer as soon as the November tax settlements are forwarded to the State Auditor.

Aid is granted to 6,789 school districts, 6,277 of which are rural districts. There are 8,451 schools listed for aid classified as follows: 258 High Schools, 184 High School Departments, 50 Junior High Schools, 770 Graded Elementary Schools and 7,189 Ungraded Elementary (Rural) Schools.

TWO MOST PLEASING EDITORIALS

Two of the most pleasing editorials regarding our Paving Celebration and which have gained wide circulation, are those written by the editor of the Minneapolis Journal and the editor of the Minneapolis Tribune. The first named was entitled "Why Brainerd Celebrates," and the latter, "Brainerd's Day of Jubilee."

Each is written by a man who has motored over the highway, who knows conditions of the old days of the detour and who realizes what an all cement paving means to the territory in what is now the longest stretch of such paving reaching from Brainerd, passing through the Twin Cities and on almost to the border of Iowa.

It is an incentive to all Minnesota to hook up with this cement highway. It has given the cause of good roads tremendous impetus. Yes, the Brainerd Paving Celebration is more than a local affair. It is state-wide in importance and the paving is being commented on in such widely separated cities as Winnipeg, Canada; Superior, Wisconsin; Tulsa, Oklahoma; Kansas City, Mo.; New Orleans, La.; Wichita, Kansas; Washington, D. C., etc., etc.

THE HOUSEWIFE'S WAGE

The Red Wing Eagle has called attention to a situation in household affairs that is fraught with deep significance. What is a reasonable wage for a housewife?

A housewife has written to Governor Theodore Christianson wanting to know if housewives have any legal right to have an amount of money given to them at regular intervals by their husbands. She says neighbors' maids receive as high as $60 a month and board and room while she as a wife receives no money at all.

The governor turned the inquiry over to the attorney general. The reply of his department was that the law does not require husbands to pay their wives money for specific reasons or purposes, but imposes the obligation of supporting them. That's all.

COUNTY ATTORNEY EDWARD L. ROGERS of Walker, who captained the University of Minnesota's great team of 1905, that tied the historic game with Michigan, expects to attend the Home Coming celebration at the University of Minnesota.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

Copyright 1926 Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"DON'T TELL THE WIFE," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS.

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce; but Ranny confides to his chum, Clay, that he loves her. He secretly discovers that she loves another man, Abner Gratman, Stiver, lumber king with whom Ranny has pending a gigantic business deal, wagers fifty thousand on Ranny's team in the International Match. Victory will mean business good will. Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman! Abner maliciously causes Ranny a nasty fall, then continues to flirt with Joan as the game progresses. Just as Ranny is about to make the winning shot he glances toward his sedan.

Upon Ranny's mind, as he galloped along, there was suddenly seared the terribly earnest picture—above all playing instincts—of the wife he loved held spellbound, not by her husband's playing, but by her lover's caressing smile. His wife, Joan, of all that vast throng the one who should be the most interested in him at this glorious moment! Not even watching him! Not interested enough to look at him; to turn her eyes away from her lover's face for a single instant.

And Abner, who had fifty thousand dollars weighing in the balance of Ranny's next stroke, but who was so sure of his personal triumph with Ranny's wife that he was not the least bit concerned about the outcome of Ranny's playing!

The first goal Ranny had made that afternoon had been the result of his own prideful determination to prove his prowess in the interloper's teeth. To show off in front of his wife.

They had been watching him then. But now—they were utterly unconscious of him, or of the mad tension of the game.

Not interested enough to take her eyes away from her lover's face.

A great hurt stabbed into Ranny's heart. Gone for him was the game—everything. Mechanically, instinctively, he swung his mallet; but his involuntary start of pain had thrown Judy off balance and checked her speed, despite her own plucky attempt to keep "on the ball."

In one upheaving moment, while an astonished crowd gasped in dismay, Ranny's mallet clove harmlessly through the air—completely missing the ball!

Another moment, and Ranny had hopelessly over-ridden the ball; so great was Judy's headlong speed. A pursuing Argentine player, with a shout of joy, swooped down and shot the ball towards his Captain, who had pulled up short in mid-field—incapable, hardly daring to believe the evidence of his eyes. It was too good to be true—from the Argentine standpoint, that is. But the Argentine Captain did not let the fact that he THOUGHT he must be dreaming slacken the alacrity with which he took advantage of a well-placed ball and a clear field.

The pursuit of Ranny had drawn all the players, except the Argentine Captain, off to one side. The Argentine player whose part it was to cover the Argentine Captain had been so trustfully engrossed in Ranny's seemingly certain goal dash that he neglected what the usual of team play dictated.

It was the winning break. Straight down the middle of the field, on the trail of a devastatingly long stroke, the Argentine Captain galloped towards the American goal.

No need for him to zig-zag—to dribble. He had things all to himself. Everyone, including the sick-at-heart Ranny, was outdistanced.

A few brief seconds later, amid a stunned silence, the ball sped dead true between the American posts, and the goal attendant's flags waved their victorious signal.

There was another minute left to play. The teams lined up in mid-field. But for crowd and players this was anticlimax. The game was over.

As for Ranny, his drawn face was the target of gentlemanly yet quizzical inspection for the eyes of his bewildered teammates and his rivals. Each man felt that something untoward had happened, but did not know what it was.

Ordinarily, friend and foe alike would have consoled over such a misfortune—"Tough luck, Ranny!" or words to that effect. But something warned all that even this hearty, comradely sympathy would be out of place now.

Their fawn, the referee, alone suspected the truth. Ranny did not care so much about the loss of the game. He was surprised to realize that. It offered proof that he had been more emotionally upset than ever before in his life.

There was an inner nervousness, an urging fire, that prompted thoughts of vengeance—immediate violence. His bloodshot eyes roved again from the ball, seeking the object of his hatred.

Away there on the sidelines he saw Joan and Abner. A group of friends had claimed their attention from each other, and enticed them out of the sedan to an informal chat directly beside the playing field border.

Their new position gave Ranny a sudden idea. He remembered the threat he had voiced to Clay Varick ere this game had gotten underway—that he would drive a ball through Abner's head.

That promise had been emboldened by unmeant bombast. A mere vigorous figure of speech.

Yet—why not take that early threat seriously and make it good? It would not be so difficult for a man of his superior marksmanship. He knew that he could aim with his mallet almost as closely as could a hunter with a rifle. Long long hours of practice had developed his direction of stroke until he could verily hit the ball into a stable bucket at a hundred feet—and that while coursing at a mad gallop.

Of course there would be the necessity of hiding—from fellow players and from spectators alike—the malicious and criminal intent of his deed. He must take that chance. The possibility of cracking Abner's head was well worth the risk of detection.

He would have to be careful. There would be others near, Joan for instance. And a slip—

But he would not, miss! The righteous wrath of a deceived husband would lend accuracy to his aim, sureness to his arm.

Of course he would not hit the ball hard enough to kill Abner. He just wanted to knock the slinky wretch out. But he must be sure to bear in mind the necessity of "pulling" his stroke a little, for a blow from a ball smashed at full strength by an expert poloist would crush like an eggshell harder heads than Abner Gratman's. If heads, indeed, came any harder than his!

There—the ball was in play now. All these vague thoughts had tumbled through Ranny's fevered and out of normal brain in the brief fraction of time that the two teams faced each other for the last scrimmage of that afternoon, awaiting the final toss-in.

Ranny knew that his whole plan would go awry unless he secured immediate possession of the ball and swept it toward the appropriate side of the field. He entertained no thought of attempting to score. Abner's head was the only goal he had objectively fixed in his mind.

However, the cautious Argentines, desperately resolved that this Yankee whirlwind must not snatch their one goal advantage away from them in the very last moments of play, concentrated on an effort to keep the ball out of the flailing orbit of his mallet.

Quite likely, if it had been an ordinary goal that Ranny fixed upon, they might have succeeded, but he got the ball, for there was no stopping the super-player, whose ability was added to by passion and multiplied by shame. The shame of a cuckold!

He had been disgraced as a player, degraded as a husband, and had been the cause of the loss of an enormous wager by Livingston Stiver, the man with whom he had hoped to consummate a coveted deal.

During this while Ranny had been dexterously taking the ball across the field, eluding the frantic Argentines.

To cover his real purpose was not hard for so expert a player. Witnesses would merely take it for granted that a ball, zealously over-stroked, had unfortunately flown across the board and collided with a spectator's head.

Foxtily Ranny coached the ball into exactly the proper position. Then—whang!

Love's Cruelties

Triumph Over Evil

In Greek and in northern mythology and also in medieval legend, the dragon represents the power of evil much as does the snake in the biblical story, and for this reason, just as Christianity was triumphing, a Christian knight, St. George, is pictured as victorious over the powers of evil as represented by the dragon.

He would have to be careful. There would be others near, Joan for instance. And a slip—

But he would not, miss! The righteous wrath of a deceived husband would lend accuracy to his aim, sureness to his arm.

Of course he would not hit the ball hard enough to kill Abner. He just wanted to knock the sly, wretched out. But he must be sure to bear in mind the necessity of "pulling" his stroke a little, for a blow from a ball smashed at full strength by an expert poloist would crush like an eggshell harder heads than Abner Gratman's, if heads, indeed, came any harder than his!

There—the ball was in play now. All these vengeful thoughts had tumbled through Ranny's fevered and out of normal brain in the brief fraction of time that the two teams faced each other for the last scrimmage of that afternoon, awaiting the final toss-in.

Ranny knew that his whole plan would go awry unless he secured immediate possession of the ball and swept it toward the appropriate side of the field. He entertained no thought of attempting to score. Abner's head was the only goal he had objectively fixed in his mind.

However, the cautious Argentines, desperately resolved that this Yankee whirlwind must not snatch their one goal advantage away from them in the very last moments of play, concentrated on an effort to keep the ball out of the falling orbit of his mallet.

Quite likely, if it had been an ordinary goal that Ranny fixed upon, they might have succeeded, but he got the ball, for there was no stopping the super-player, whose ability was added to by passion and multiplied by shame. The shame of a cuckold!

He had been disgraced as a player, degraded as a husband, and had been the cause of the loss of an enormous wager by Livingston Stinner, the man with whom he had hoped to consummate a coveted deal.

During this while Ranny had been dexterously taking the ball across the field, eluding the frantic Argentines.

To cover his real purpose was not hard for so expert a player. Witnesses would merely take it for granted that a ball, zealously over-stroked, had unfortunately flown across the board and collided with a spectator's head.

Foxily Ranny coaxed the ball into exactly the proper position. Then—whang!

Love's Cruelties

Ed Howe discovers that as a race becomes more practical with age, the credits and debts of love are gone over with more candor and wisdom. Some of the debts are very hard on both sides; some say worse with women than with men. Still, love sometimes slaps a man pretty hard, too.—Cap-per's Weekly.

Triumph Over Evil

In Greek and in northern mythology and also in medieval legend, the dragon represents the power of evil much as does the snake in the biblical story, and for this reason, just as Christianity was triumphing, a Christian knight, St. George, is pictured as victorious over the powers of evil as represented by the dragon.

The thrills of the buggy were badly broken and it is thought that one of the front legs of the horse was badly sprained. The genial doctor was not injured at all.

Greatest Desert NotWithout Good Points

Most people are accustomed to regard the Sahara as a vast plain of sand. But this is not so, according to Capt. Angus Buchanan, who has made several explorations of the great African desert. There are great extents of unrelieved sand, but also several ranges of hills, with sparse vegetation; also plains of pebbles as terrible as the sand.

In his recent book setting forth his experiences in the Sahara, Captain Buchanan says amongst the strange things seen was a town with fortified walls of salt. The explorer has much to say of the various tribes of native inhabitants. His opinion is high of the Tuaregs, the people of the veil—white race, or almost white. They are the real nomads of the open and over-lords of the oases. Their faithful observance of their times of prayer is commented upon to the disadvantage of the Christian; but at the same time these men could indulge in blood-thirsty raiding, and the people of the oases are immoral and decadent, so that the Mohammedan religion hardly scores.

Many new species of birds and mammals were seen, and specimens obtained for the British museum. It is interesting to note that there are nine varieties of skylark in the great desert. One of the larks is a bad bird, because, when the boys chase it, it only flies off a short distance, and thus lures them into the desert, so intent on the chase that they do not observe where they are going and so get lost. Another is a "scholar" and a good bird because "it is content with the seeds by the wayside, and disturbs neither cultivation nor place of dwelling." The explorer's final word about the desert is that its poverty renews the grace of gratitude for the benefits of civilization. He thinks it would be "good medicine for the malcontents of society."

Well's Peculiar Qualities

A fresh-water well only a few yards from the seashore which, although its level is below that of the sea, is not affected by the tides, yet is not contaminated by the salt water, is one of the sights at Longport, N. J., a few miles south of Atlantic City. The well, according to Paul Schreman, in the Geographical Review, has shown a rise and fall of about sixteen feet. When first drilled the water gushed as high as 14 feet above the ground, but increased drilling in the vicinity has caused the water to drop as much as 30 feet below the surface. The water is always sweet and has long been used for town consumption, but the flooding and ebbing tides cause the water to rise and drop in the well. After several years' study it was found that the weight of incoming tides on an underground stratum of clay caused the latter to bend and force fresh water from underground sources higher in the well, while ebb tides, lessening the weight, had the reverse result.

Ultra-Violet in Pills

Ultra-violet rays in pill form may be a popular medicine of the future, according to statements made recently at the British Medical association. The ultra-violet rays from the sun are helpful in curing rickets. If cholesterol, a white, tasteless, odorless type of alcohol that constitutes a part of living matter, is exposed to ultra-violet rays it becomes "activated," and when introduced into the blood it enables the intestines to absorb the salts, lime and phosphates required to build up bone. This radiated cholesterol may be put up in tablet form, and so may displace sunbaths and cod-liver oil.

Latin Alphabet Gains

Reports from the Caucasus indicate that the movement to substitute Latin letters for Oriental characters in printing the native languages is making rapid progress. In Baku, the oil city, Enl Jol, a paper that changed to the Latin alphabet, has doubled its circulation. In Armenia and in Azerbaijan the Latin alphabet has been introduced into the public schools, and the spread of the use of Latin letters is especially fast in Georgia. Foreigners living in the Caucasus are eager for the general adoption of the new style, as it facilitates their efforts to learn the native tongues.

Frock in Letter Mail

Dresses can be mailed now in ordinary-sized white envelopes. This was done recently by a London (Eng.) girl who wished to send a frock to a friend. The frock was made of the flimsiest chiffon, and when she had folded it several times she found that she could pack it into an envelope used for everyday correspondence! She affixed a 1½d. stamp to it and sent it through the post. No extra charge was required from the addressee. The maximum weight which may be sent through the post for 1½d. is two ounces.

Roman Water Calliope

A circus "calliope" played with water, instead of steam, was one of Nero's playthings, according to Italian archeologists, following studies near the golden house of Nero. The "water" calliope was invented by the Egyptians and brought to Rome three centuries before Christ.

Water served to create the air pressure necessary to produce different tones in the calliope.

Several keyboards with a mechanism of strings were used to regulate the air-pressure valves in the metal pipes.

The Two Green Ladies

JIM WARBURTON stood on the hill where the dividing line separated the Hinman property from the land of his ancestors, now his own. The Warburton acres had taken on a new value when the great motor highway had cut through part of the property only to swerve aside and diverge from the Hinman acres and cross the bridge, leaving the latter property marooned amid its rich pastures and woodlands. The Hinmans and Warburtons had been unfriendly for some years—owing to a marriage that ended in divorce between two members of the families.

"There was only one Hinman worth looking at in this world," gloomed Jim Warburton, "and that was Sylvia—and she turned me down flat for that Meade fellow. Don't know as I blame her for I'm not much account and he has barrels of coin."

He walked along the imaginary boundary line, remembered something about white birches and, finding them, scratched the mossy turf and found an ancient landmark—a small square of white stone on which small letters were chiseled. It proved to mark the property of James Warburton, in the "yr. 1830." He walked down to the highway but could not find the other marker. He knew that the line was a straight one "cast from white marker."

If the new highway had only run on for another fifteen feet some of the Hinman property would have bordered on it—but what difference would that make to the Hinmans—Sylvia and her aunt were the only ones left, and they lived in New York.

A week later, Jim, coming back home from the county seat for a week-end in his lonely house, heard strange news from his man of all work, Hanson.

"Yes, sir, Mr. Warburton, there be squatters on your property," declared Hanson. "Such a nerve—"

"Squatters? Gypsies?" asked Jim, frowning.

"Nothing like that! Two wimmin be building a little bungalow—all themselves, one of them portable things, and the outside is nailed with silver birch logs and there's a sign a-swinging—'The Green Ladies' Tea House'—Shucks, to be trespassin' and all."

"Thank you, Hanson, I'll take a look around after dinner, whenever you wife has it prepared."

After the early dinner, Jim, cool, satisfied that Hanson's story was somewhat exaggerated, walked down the long garden, through the rustic gate and across the old orchard of dead trees to the open hillside where scattered birches marched down the hill to the new highway.

The new bungalow, all silvery white where it wasn't stained green or brown, was there, and from the kitchen in the rear, came the aroma of good things to eat—fried chicken, new asparagus, strawberry shortcake—Jim's mouth watered. Mrs. Hanson's cooking was below par. He frowned again and walked up to the white birches, to look at the boundary mark. He could see the little bungalow, built just inside the Warburton property, so as to take advantage of the coveted position on the motor road, and he could see a number of cars parked on the private road on the other side that led to the Hinman house.

Inside the little house it was cozy enough. Green tables set with worn but exquisite damask, and dainty old china and silver. In the background was a tall, silver-haired woman in a green dress, and waiting on a group of prosperous-looking motorists was a pretty waitress, also wearing a short green frock and a crisp organdie apron. She did not see Jim Warburton until she had brought dessert to the large table, then she came to him with a tumbler of cold water and a napkin.

"Jim Warburton?" she exclaimed with a guilty blush.

"Sylvia—Mrs. Meade?" he stammered awkwardly. "I never dreamed it could be you or your aunt."

"Why not?" she asked lightly, still with that blush of embarrassment. "Auntie and I must live—and the old house is too far back from the road to be profitable—and we even plan to sleep here, because it is so lonely down there in the woods."

"The old place has been closed too long, Sylvia. Now, why can't you and Miss Hinman come over to Warburton and stay in the south wing until you are settled here?"

"I will bring Aunt Winifred," said Sylvia, and departed without taking his order at all. Later on, the three dined amicably together, and Jim told them that he had come there intending to oust them from his land.

"Your land?" repeated Sylvia's thrilling voice. "Why, Jim, we have the old deeds, you know, and the line is a curve from the white mark up above to the three white birches opposite the magnolia tree on your south lawn! So we are on Hinman property and your garden trespasses a bit—but what is that between neighbors?"

Jim blushed. "You said Meade did not come with you?"

Sylvia laughed. "Why should he? When I refused him, he married a charming actress and lives in Hollywood."

"Then," exclaimed Jim, "suppose we go outside and discuss the boundary line?"

Tailored Two-Piece of Moire Has High Neck

This smartly tailored two-piece black dress of moire has a high neck and long tight sleeves. The blouse and skirt have a drape effect.

Crusher Type of Hat Favors Use of Velvet

Velvet trims, copies of imports from the small French houses, are among the early favorites of the fall season. The drapes at the front or the side are displayed in plain and stitched velvet, in solid velvet, and in this material combined with satin, also plain or stitched. A circular stitched satin section in the top of the crown is observed often, with a rolling stitched satin brim, while ear-to-ear crown folds are much in evidence.

Metallic trimmings are used also with metal bands in a copper finish encircling the crown of one model and metallic effects in novelty ribbon are widely observed.

The long bag crown with the circular flat top in triangular sections is noted, draped at one side in an intricately stitched model, while all the brims are observed to turn up at the back.

The colors featured this fall are the red shades, with emphasis placed upon poppy red, the tone so well liked a year or two ago, and on the wine hues. A continued popularity for almond green also is predicted.

Novel Sewing Case Is Space-Saving Article

A novel sewing case, the top section of which is equipped with a clock, is among the unusual space-saving articles now being shown. It resembles a regular mantel clock both as to shape and size. The case rests on a base having four tiny knobs. When the top is lifted a complete set of sewing articles is disclosed. The case comes in several shapes, including semi-ovals, fancy pyramid tops and squares, and in a number of colors. The colors are mainly pastel shades, but all are finished off at the edges with a gold border.

Kasha Is Glorified in Many Interesting Ways

Kasha has been glorified in various ways; gold-and-silver cross threads glisten in the new "kashador" and glisten most effectively when the material is finely plaited. In another pattern shown the kasha is embroidered closely with gold and silver in tiny designs that look like characters from the Chinese alphabet. In still other patterns the kasha is almost completely hidden by point de Beauvais stitches in designs ranging from the geometric to conventionalized primitive scenes.

Peplums Used in Tier Effects for Fall Wear

The use of peplums in tiered effects is a new development in fashion that is of distinct importance. It clearly indicates a departure from the prevailing straightline silhouette and gives opportunity for extremely interesting effects. Waists, at the natural line of the figure, are obviously defined by belts and sashes, although in one or two cases a dropped line is featured.

Embroidered Shawls

Since there are at present few real innovations in shawls, the advent of petit point embroidery in this field has attracted much attention. Heavy silk in broad strips is used, with, of course, deep fringe, and there is embroidery in the four corners, and there only.

The Slim Silhouette

The fact that the most recent skirts are rather full has in no way affected the slimness of the silhouette. The skirt fullness is often gathered around the waist, but some designers favor making the top of the skirt entirely of point which dovetails into the bodice.

Velvet Smartest for Evening Wear

Can Be Plaited or Shirred; Laces Also Very Much in Favor.

If you are considering evening attire for fall or winter there are many attractive fabrics from which to choose. So all there is for you to do is to decide upon the style you desire and select your material accordingly.

Velvet is undoubtedly the smartest of them all in sheer, supple weights which can be plaited or shirred. Laces, too, are very much in vogue; thread laces soft and fine, and heavier ones where the pattern presents a glistening cere effect. Lustrous crepe-backed satins are used, while the flimsier georgettes and chiffons are very effective when posed over self-colored or contrasting slips.

White is used especially in velvets and satins and black is employed by all the haut couturiers. Then there are indescribably lovely greens, called in some houses sea shades, with wonderful sea and robin's-egg blues, as well as those with a tinge of lavender. Bright blue on the order of turquoise is also smart.

But when we come to the vin shades and the rose tones, which somewhat resemble ashes of roses, observes a Paris fashion correspondent in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, I cannot find words to describe them. They are so beautiful and really are the new color note of the season.

Trimblings, too, are a bit unusual. If you like fringe you now can use it to your heart's content.

The loveliest ostrich fringes are obtainable in shaded and solid colorings. This feather trimming is applied as a wide border, extending from just below the hips to the frock hem, or it is used in clusters and pompons, and in a variety of other modes, which make it very new and attractive. Rodler shows a silk fringe woven to imitate colored beads, which is exceptionally pleasing.

Embroideries of rhinestones and crystals and colored sequins are very effective for evening. They are used

Gwen Lee, "Movie" Actress in "Upstage," in Black Velvet Gown.

In solid patterns, rather than to outline a motif, and often form girdles and other waistline garniture.

We have only touched upon colors, trimmings and materials for evening. As to styles and silhouettes, they are as varied as the taste of the wearer suggests. And this very latitude of choice indicates that the fall and winter modes are unusually smart and alluring.

Skirt Lengths Vary

Skirt lengths, according to the haute couture who dominate dress designing, are not so important as women think. Some designers favor showing the knee while others insist the knee must be covered. In truth, the smart skirt length depends on the build and taste of the wearer. The woman with an ungainly calf is as much in fashion with a long skirt as the dainty maid built on more slender lines with her knees barely covered.

New Square Designs

The latest sport dresses made from imported French materials are on the square and the squares are on the dresses. These woolen fabrics are decorated with large shaded squares. The graduation is made by the loosening or tightening of some of the colorings of the yarns in weaving. The heavier of these fabrics are used for motoring and traveling coats.

Magnifying Mirrors

Magnifying glasses have long been familiar to the feline eye, but the magnifying mirror of small size has been principally associated with physicians and hospitals. Germany is now sending over magnifying mirrors that are about four inches in diameter, with an adjustable composition handle that may be used as a prop.

Leather or Suede Belts

In the recent exhibitions of French models one of the outstanding features of most of the tailored and sport dresses, coats and ensembles is the narrow belt of leather or of suede.

Making Thanksgiving Day One of Keen Appreciation

What more outstanding expression of Service which really served has the World known than that of those sturdy Pilgrims who went ashore from the Mayflower in 1620 and established themselves at Plymouth!

It was not only a time when service to each other was essential to their very existence but a time for Thanksgiving!

Though Time has changed, the need of Service which really serves is no less desirable now than then. And surely, it was not only desirable then but an absolute necessity.

As we look forward to Thanksgiving Day this year, let us all cherish the spirit of the occasion and avoid clothing our thankfulness in a matter-of-fact acceptance. Let us make it real; from the heart—keenly appreciating the service others have given us.

As usual, our Store will be closed all of Thanksgiving Day.

Crusher Type of Hat Favors Use of Velvet

Velvet tams, copies of imports from the small French houses, are among the early favorites of the fall season. The drapes at the front or the side are displayed in plain and stitched velvet, in solid velvet, and in this material combined with satin, also plain or stitched. A circular stitched satin section in the top of the crown is observed often, with a rolling stitched satin brim, while ear-to-ear crown folds are much in evidence.

Metallic trimmings are used also with metal bands in a copper finish encircling the crown of one model and metallic effects in novelty ribbon are widely observed.

The long bag crown with the circular flat top in triangular sections is noted, draped at one side in an intricately stitched model, while all the brims are observed to turn up at the back.

The colors featured this fall are the red shades, with emphasis placed upon poppy red, the tone so well liked a year or two ago, and on the wine hues. A continued popularity for almond green also is predicted.

Novel Sewing Case Is Space-Saving Article

A novel sewing case, the top section of which is equipped with a clock, is among the unusual space-saving articles now being shown. It resembles a regular mantel clock both as to shape and size. The case rests on a base having four tiny knobs. When the top is lifted a complete set of sewing articles is disclosed. The case comes in several shapes, including semi-ovals, fancy pyramid tops and squares, and in a number of colors. The colors are mainly pastel shades, but all are finished off at the edges with a gold border.

Kasha is Glorified in Many Interesting Ways

Kasha has been glorified in various ways; gold-and-silver cross threads glisten in the new "kashador" and glisten most effectively when the material is finely plaited. In another pattern shown the kasha is embroidered closely with gold and silver in tiny designs that look like characters from the Chinese alphabet. In still other patterns the kasha is almost completely hidden by point de Beauvais stitches in designs ranging from the geometric to conventionalized primitive scenes.

Peplums Used in Tier Effects for Fall Wear

The use of peplums in tiered effects is a new development in fashion that is of distinct importance. It clearly indicates a departure from the prevailing straightline silhouette and gives opportunity for extremely interesting effects. Waists, at the natural line of the figure, are obviously defined by belts and sashes, although in one or two cases a dropped line is featured.

Embroidered Shawls

Since there are at present few real innovations in shawls, the advent of petit point embroidery in this field has attracted much attention. Heavy silk in broad strips is used, with, of course, deep fringe, and there is embroidery in the four corners, and there only.

The Slim Silhouette

The fact that the most recent skirts are rather full has in no way affected the slimmest of the silhouette. The skirt fullness is often gathered around the waist, but some designers favor making the top of the skirt entirely of point which dovetails into the bodice.

Velvet Smartest for Evening Wear

Can Be Plaited or Shirred; Laces Also Very Much in Favor.

If you are considering evening attire for fall or winter there are many attractive fabrics from which to choose. So all there is for you to do is to decide upon the style you desire and select your material accordingly.

Velvet is undoubtedly the smartest of them all in sheer, supple weights which can be plaited or shirred. Laces, too, are very much in vogue; thread laces soft and fine, and heavier ones where the pattern presents a glistening cere effect. Lustrous crepe-backed satins are used, while the flatter georgettes and chiffons are very effective when posed over self-colored or contrasting slips.

White is used especially in velvets and satins and black is employed by all the haute couturiers. Then there are indescribably lovely greens, called in some houses sea shades, with wonderful sea and robin's-egg blues, as well as those with a tinge of lavender. Bright blue on the order of turquoise is also smart.

But when we come to the vin shades and the rose tones, which somewhat resemble ashes of roses, observes a Paris fashion correspondent in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, I cannot find words to describe them. They are so beautiful and really are the new color note of the season.

Trimmings, too, are a bit unusual. If you like fringe you now can use it to your heart's content.

The loveliest ostrich fringes are obtainable in shaded and solid colorings. This feather trimming is applied as a wide border, extending from just below the hips to the frock hem, or it is used in clusters and pompons, and in a variety of other modes, which make it very new and attractive. Rodier shows a silk fringe woven to imitate colored beads, which is exceptionally pleasing.

Embroideries of rhinestones and crystals and colored sequins are very effective for evening. They are used

Gwen Lee, "Movie" Actress in "Upstage," in Black Velvet Gown.

In solid patterns, rather than to outline a motif, and often form girdles and other waistline garniture.

We have only touched upon colors, trimmings and materials for evening. As to styles and silhouettes, they are as varied as the taste of the wearer suggests. And this very latitude of choice indicates that the fall and winter modes are unusually smart and alluring.

Skirt Lengths Vary

Skirt lengths, according to the haute couture who dominate dress designing, are not so important as women think. Some designers favor showing the knee while others insist the knee must be covered. In truth, the smart skirt length depends on the build and taste of the wearer. The woman with an ungainly calf is as much in fashion with a long skirt as the dainty maid built on more slender lines with her knees barely covered.

New Square Designs

The latest sport dresses made from imported French materials are on the square and the squares are on the dresses. These woolen fabrics are decorated with large shaded squares. The graduation is made by the loosening or tightening of some of the colorings of the yarns in weaving. The heavier of these fabrics are used for motoring and traveling coats.

Magnifying Mirrors

Magnifying glasses have long been familiar to the feminine eye, but the magnifying mirror of small size has been principally associated with physicians and hospitals. Germany is now sending over magnifying mirrors that are about four inches in diameter, with an adjustable composition handle that may be used as a prop.

Leather or Suede Belts

In the recent exhibitions of French models one of the outstanding features of most of the tailored and sport dresses, coats and ensembles is the narrow belt of leather or of suede.

GOPHERS LOST TO MICHIGAN, SCORE 7 TO 6

BREAK OF THE GAME WENT TO MICHIGAN, GOPHERS FAR SUPERIOR

ALL THAT'S LEFT NOW IS TO ARGUE IT OUT IN STOVE LEAGUE

By WILLIAM E. HALLBERG (United Press Staff Correspondent) Minneapolis, Nov. 22.—(UP)—The Little Brown Jug is back in its familiar resting place at Ann Arbor, there to remain until Minnesota again tries to wrest it from Michigan. Minnesota lost Saturday on a fumble by a heart breaking score of 7 to 6.

All that is left of the latest football season is the inevitable comparison of records, the squabbles over who's going to be on whose schedule and the all-things and all-teams of all-star football teams. In those of these past season pastimes the situation is favorable to the Gophers.

If the matching of statistics goes deep enough, it will reveal that Minnesota had a pretty good year after all. Last Saturday's game will come in for a lot of discussion as a contest wherein the better team lost, which nobody yet has denied.

The annual avoidance of Minnesota probably will be much in evidence at the schedule's factory's

MANY PLEASANT FEATURES CONNECTED WITH PRESENT SEASON

ILLINOIS NOT DISHEARTENED BY LOSS OF "RED" GRANGE

By CLARK B. KELSEY (United Press Staff Correspondent) Chicago, Nov. 22.—Notre Dame University at South Bend, Ind., stands out supreme as the one undefeated team in the corn and wheat belts, where some of the greatest teams in the country are developed. Next to Notre Dame stands Michigan, 1925 champions of the western conference which again holds the honor in 1926 but is forced this season to share the championship with Northwestern University, a team which has never before topped the Big Ten in its 30 years of competition.

Minnesota, one of the strongest teams in the middle west, played a brilliant season; the Gophers broke even in the conference scoring column, losing two games to Michigan and beating Iowa and Wisconsin.

The first loss of the season to Notre Dame and the first Michigan defeat may be credited to the illness of coach "Doc" Spears. As Spears returned to his team and as the season wore on the Gophers increased in power and resourcefulness and although Michigan again defeated the Gophers Saturday, the Wolverines did not outplay the Northerners. But it's the scoring that counts and that's what Michigan had.

Northwestern's claim on the title is a popular one in most Big Ten camps, because of the sportsmanship displayed by the Wildcats last year in disclaiming any right to the title after defeating Michigan, leader in the Big Ten conference percentage column.

There were several other pleasant features of the 1926 season. Ohio State, which figured as a lowly team in the Big Ten after the successful teams on which Chick Harley, the Workman brothers and Stinecomb played, came back and played a very successful season.

Illinois, always a strong team throughout the season showed that the loss of "Red" Grange had not disheartened it. Purdue, like Northwestern, a Big Ten underdog, had a successful year. Wisconsin, which started out on the wrong track, came back and won its share of games.

Chicago, considered the "Horse Shoe" team of the Big Ten for many years, finally lost to every conference contender. Coach A. M. Stagg, veteran coach, had the poorest material he had ever worked with. Indiana lost every game, but gained a capable coach, Pat Page.

Iowa also played a losing year but showed the conference such outstanding stars as Kutsch at halfback and Nelson at tackle.

Notre Dame is the only major team in the entire territory to weather the season without a defeat. Coach Knute Rockne's team is not a member of the Big Ten but defeated three members of the select circle. The closest game the Irish ran into this season was the Northwestern fracas, and that contest came near being a scoreless tie.

TWO MEMBERS OF HUNTING PARTIES LOST IN WOODS

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—(UP)—Two members of separate hunting parties who were lost in the northwest while hunting deer were found over the week end.

Archie Hammergren of St. Paul, a policeman, became separated from his companion Friday about 25 miles from Big Falls and spent the night out alone in the bitter cold, tramping through the snow for a double purpose, to keep warm and to try to find the other three members of his party. Suffering from exposure and exhaustion Hammergren was found Saturday.

Gordon Walters, 23, of Iron Mountain, Mich., became separated from his party on Friday and was found Sunday, lying near a road in a state of collapse. Both his feet were frozen and it was necessary to amputate the toes. He was taken to Ishpeming, Mich.

HEDDA HOYT SAYS---

By HEDDA HOYT
SALESMEN'S INFLUENCE
New York, Nov. 22.—(UP)—Stop! Look! and Don't Listen too much is a good slogan for the shopper who is easily influenced by salespeople. Women waste thousands of dollars buying things they do not really want merely because they are over-persuaded by clerks whose business it is to sell. Better class shops and stores are insisting that their salespeople suggest only appropriate and becoming styles believing that a customer pleased is a customer gained. But alas! many clerks, particularly in smaller shops, work on a commission basis and they sell with the price-tag in mind rather than the buyer's requirements.

If your own judgment doesn't tell you at once which of two gowns you prefer it's a fairly good sign that you don't want either of them. Do not let a clerk who has never seen you before make a choice for you. The advice of a friend is far preferable since the friend knows what colors and lines are best suited to you. "See yourself as others see you" is not a bad idea. Very often we delude ourselves into thinking we have sylph-like forms when we are built like fullgrown hippos. In such a case, a little friendly advice will be helpful.

In trying to make the best of our looks we must make a mental note of the worst of our looks and try to overcome faults by clever dressing. Nude stockings, for instance, have proven that most women deceive themselves by thinking they have good-looking ankles. Nothing makes the ankle more conspicuous than light hosiery. Yet all women wear them. I doubt whether there is a clerk in the world who would dare tell a woman that her ankles were too large for light stockings. Feminine purring sells more goods and pads the sales-slip.

Stop—letting salespeople flatter you into thinking you are what you are not. Know your own lines, your coloring. Be your age!

Look—long before choosing. Look to see what other well-dressed women of your type are wearing and don't depend too much upon your own creative concoctions.

Don't listen to advice you want to believe but do not believe when it comes from someone to whom a commission is more important than future patronage!

CHRISTMAS SEALS CAMPAIGN STARTS

E. R. Burns, Ironton, Chosen as the Campaign Director

APPOINTS LIEUTENANTS

Braierd District Placed in Charge of Mrs. Levi Johnson

Plans for the county-wide sale of Christmas seals are underway under the direction of E. R. Burns of Ironton who has been chosen for county campaign director. The following managers in the county have been appointed up to date: Mrs. Levi Johnson, Braierd; E. R. Burns, Ironton; Miss Julia Sharp, Crosby; A. F. Knief, Deerwood; E. R. Burns, Ironton; Rev. A. T. Nelson, Pequot.

Supplies for the sale have been received this week by the local managers. The Christmas Seal this year is unusually attractive, the campaign workers report. The design is repeated in poster and window cards, which will soon be making their appearance in conspicuous places throughout the county.

The sales force throughout the county will include rural school children, who will have charge of the country districts, and local managers with groups of adult or school children solicitors working under them in the towns. All Christmas Seal workers are volunteers and are making a generous contribution of time and effort to the fight against tuberculosis.

"We expect to increase our Christmas Seal sale this year," the county campaign director declares. "The Christmas Seals are doing such a wonderful work not only in fighting tuberculosis but in promoting health in general that we want our county to do its share in keeping it up."

KILLED WHILE CLEANING RIFLE

George B. McKay, Brother of Three Braierd Residents Accidentally Killed

AT OTTAWA, CANADA

Bullet Entered Chin Causing Instant Death; Was Well Known Sportsman

The following article taken from the Ottawa Evening Citizen, of Ottawa, Canada, tells of the circumstances of which George Bruce McKay, well known sportsman, brother of W. D. McKay, secretary of the Water and Light Board, Braierd, came to his death on November 11:

"While cleaning his rifle this morning at his home in preparation to go hunting, George Bruce McKay, aged 65 years, accidentally discharged the weapon, the bullet entering the base of his chin, coming out at the side of his skull and lodging in the ceiling. He died instantly."

"The unfortunate man, who was a well known tour and feed merchant was sitting on a chair in the kitchen of his home, cleaning the rifle, which he was holding between his knees, with the barrel pointing to his chin. He was using a rag tied on the end of a string to clean the gun and in some unknown manner, as he stooped over, the cord is believed to have become caught in the trigger, and as Mr. McKay straightened up it was pulled, discharging the rifle."

"The bullet, the only one in the gun, entered the base of Mr. McKay's chin, and came out through the side of his skull, leaving a hole of about two inches in diameter, and shattering every tooth in his head. He fell to the floor dead."

Besides his widow, Mr. McKay is survived by four sons, Percy, Robert, George and Jack, and a daughter, Miss Edith McKay, and three brothers who reside in Braierd, W. D. McKay, J. A. McKay, and C. D. McKay.

REVIVAL MEETINGS

Every Night This Week at 1st Baptist Church, Rev. E. A. Fernlund Preaching

The revival meetings will continue at the First Baptist church every night this week with Rev. E. A. Fernlund preaching. The attendance has been on the increase from the first night, and Sunday was a day with well attended congregations. He expects that tonight will be a big night and has an interesting program to present.

Preaching last evening the evangelist stated, "We must have a great world revival of old time religion or our civilization is doomed. There is no power that can restrain the lawless except Jesus Christ." He pointed out the fact that the present day tendency to coddle criminals and treat them as being mentally unbalanced rather than responsible for their deeds, has led to a reign of lawlessness. The Word of God teaches punishment for transgressors, not reformatory measures.

On Tuesday afternoon there will be a service for the children immediately after school. They will practice for a junior chorus which will be used soon. At every service Mr. Fernlund will sing and play the piano.

HEDDA HOYT SAYS---

By HEDDA HOYT
SALESMEN'S INFLUENCE
New York, Nov. 22.—(UP)—Stop! Look! and Don't Listen too much is a good slogan for the shopper who is easily influenced by salespeople. Women waste thousands of dollars buying things they do not really want merely because they are over-persuaded by clerks whose business it is to sell. Better class shops and stores are insisting that their salespeople suggest only appropriate and becoming styles believing that a customer pleased is a customer gained.

But alas! many clerks, particularly in smaller shops, work on a commission basis and they sell with the price-tag in mind rather than the buyer's requirements. If your own judgment doesn't tell you at once which of two gowns you prefer it's a fairly good sign that you don't want either of them. Do not let a clerk who has never seen you before make a choice for you. The advice of a friend is far preferable since the friend knows what colors and lines are best suited to you. "See yourself as others see you" is not a bad idea. Very often we delude ourselves into thinking we have sylph-like forms when we are built like fullgrown hippos. In such a case, a little friendly advice will be helpful.

In trying to make the best of our looks we must make a mental note of the worst of our looks and try to overcome faults by clever dressing. Nude stockings, for instance, have proven that most women deceive themselves by thinking they have good-looking ankles. Nothing makes the ankle more conspicuous than light hosiery. BOARD OF PARDONS CONSIDERS PLEA FOR MERTON MUNN

HAS SERVED 18 YEARS OF LIFE SENTENCE FOR MURDER

WAS SENTENCED BY JUDGE W. S. McCLENAHAN IN BELTRAMI COUNTY

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—(UP)—The state board of pardons today took under advisement a plea for the freeing of Merton S. Munn, a Spanish American war veteran, who has served 18 years of a life sentence for murder.

Convicted by a jury in January, 1908, in Beltrami county, he was sentenced by Judge W. S. McClelahan of Beltrami district court to be hanged, but this sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in the Stillwater penitentiary. A letter from Judge McClelahan was read today admitting a "miscarriage of justice."

Munn was alleged to have shot and killed Gustave Franklin at Spooner, Minn. Franklin, the evidence showed, was in the habit of mistreating his wife.

On the night of May 14, 1907, Franklin, witnesses said, went to the restaurant, berated his wife and threatened to do injury to her. Munn, it was said, took a hand in the quarrel, struck Franklin and shot him through the heart.

W. T. Coe, Minneapolis attorney, pleading for Munn, pictured the slayer as a man who had risked his life to protect a woman, and introduced McClelahan's letter.

Judge McClelahan said that first degree manslaughter was the most serious offense of which Munn should have been convicted.

He also took responsibility for the life sentence.

Others who urged freedom for Munn were Henry Funkel, Beltrami county attorney, at the time of the conviction, and Louis Leitner, state adjutant of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Curious Facts About Your Car and Its "Gas"

By AMAN P. INGALLS

New York is one of the four states which have no consumption tax on gasoline. The last legislature appointed a committee to consider motor vehicle legislation generally, and it has been dealing particularly with the question of a gasoline tax. Newspapers report that sentiment for such a tax is stronger than formerly on the ground that if the money is spent for highways it will equalize conditions as between New York and other states. Hundreds of thousands of motorists constantly use New York's roads, and it is urged that such a tax would compel them to contribute toward their building and maintenance. The New York motorist outside of his own state pays gas taxes to help maintain the roads he uses, and it is felt that the rule ought to work both ways. Some automobile clubs in the state have declared in favor of a two cent tax, which it is expected would produce about $15,000,000 annually.

The United States is now supplying over seventy per cent of the world's crude oil production. Since 1857 this country has supplied sixty-four per cent of the world's total output, as revealed by the following recent figures: World production, 13,467,493,000 barrels; United States production, 8,669,929,000. This country, however, accounts for the bulk of the world's consumption. With an oil-fueled navy, a sixty-four per cent oil burning merchant marine and twenty million motor cars the United States is more dependent upon oil than any other country.

The Carnegie Institute of Technology at a conference to be held at Pittsburgh November 15 to 19 to consider new uses for bituminous coal will hear the results of recent investigations on deriving oil from coal. Among the speakers are Dr. Frederick Bergius of Heidelberg, Germany, inventor of the Bergius method of the production of oil from coal; Professor Franz Fischer, director of the Institute of Coal Research, Mulheim-Ruhr, and General Georges Palat of France, inventor of a process for making methyl alcohol from coal.

British pottery ovens are now being successfully fired by oil fuel as a substitute for coal. So satisfactory have been the results that it is now predicted that the whole method of pottery firing may be revolutionized.

Navajo Indians Afflicted

It is officially stated that the Navajo Indians are suffering from widespread trachoma, a disease which leads to blindness, and that probably one-third of the remaining members of this tribe are afflicted. A material affliction of this same tribe is the absence of good wells on their lands. Great areas are practically useless because of the lack of water.

Long Island is a model place for market gardens, the soil being from two to six feet in depth, with enough phosphate to last under ordinary circumstances for about 40,000 years, and potash to last double that length of time, if estimates of soil conditions are correct as made by some experts.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. —Advt.

BOARD OF PARDONS CONSIDERS PLEA FOR MERTON MUNN

HAS SERVED 18 YEARS OF LIFE SENTENCE FOR MURDER

WAS SENTENCED BY JUDGE W. S. McCLENNAN IN BELTRAMI COUNTY

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—(UP)—The state board of pardons today took under advisement a plea for the freeing of Merton S. Munn, a Spanish American war veteran, who has served 18 years of a life sentence for murder.

Convicted by a jury in January, 1908, in Beltrami county, he was sentenced by Judge W. S. McClellan of Beltrami district court to be hanged, but this sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in the Stillwater penitentiary. A letter from Judge McClellan was read today admitting a "miscarriage of justice."

Munn was alleged to have shot and killed Gustave Franklin at Spooner, Minn. Franklin, the evidence showed, was in the habit of mistreating his wife.

On the night of May 14, 1907, Franklin, witnesses said, went to the restaurant, berated his wife and threatened to do injury to her. Munn, it was said, took a hand in the quarrel, struck Franklin and shot him through the heart.

W. T. Coe, Minneapolis attorney, pleading for Munn, pictured the slayer as a man who had risked his life to protect a woman, and introduced McClellan's letter.

Judge McClellan said that first degree manslaughter was the most serious offense of which Munn should have been convicted.

He also took responsibility for the life sentence.

Others who urged freedom for Munn were Henry Funkley, Beltrami county attorney, at the time of the conviction, and Louis Leitner, state adjutant of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Norma Shearer Fascinating as Home-ly Steno Who Learns Beauty in "His Secretary"

The combination of Hobart Henley as the director and Norma Shearer as the star, with Lew Cody, is proving an irresistible one. The trio that made "A Slave of Fashion" has contributed another picture called "His Secretary," which opened last night at the Lyceum Theatre and is showing again tonight. To say that it is a scream is putting it mild, indeed.

Navajo Indians Afflicted

It is officially stated that the Navajo Indians are suffering from widespread trachoma, a disease which leads to blindness, and that probably one-third of the remaining members of this tribe are afflicted. A material affliction of this same tribe is the absence of good wells on their lands. Great areas are practically useless because of the lack of water.

Long Island Soil Rich

Long Island is a model place for market gardens, the soil being from two to six feet in depth, with enough phosphate to last under ordinary circumstances for about 40,000 years, and potash to last double that length of time, if estimates of soil conditions are correct as made by some experts.

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One boy gained 11 pounds in 7 weeks and is now strong and healthy

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, sugar coated and as easy to take as candy.

One boy gained 11½ pounds in seven weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust. Sixty tablets for 60 cents at H. P. Dunn's, C. D. Johnson's, Economy Drug Co. and all druggists and money back if not satisfied—always insist on McCoy's—the original and genuine. —Adv.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some forms says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. —Adv.
